Profile statement

Remember Myspace? It started long before Myspace, my love for web design and development that is. My dad bought my siblings and I our very first computer when I was eight years old. A clunky, box-like Emachine that took snail's pace to start up while humming. From then , countless hours were spent playing with MS Paint and surfing the web.

Gurl Talk was the very first social platform that I partook in. Like Myspace, I had a customizable profile page with a guestbook, where I could add friends to my friend list. I learned how to code and designed themes for my profile. I became obsessed, crawled the internet, inspected others' codes, and hacked them into my own.

That passion transitioned into design school after high school. I studied graphic design and illustration with an emphasis on digital art at the Minneapolis College of Art and Design. I freelanced for many years doing web and graphic design projects. My thirst for knowledge for web development pushed me to go back to school. I graduated from the University of Minnesota in May 2018 with a full-stack development certificate.

I landed my first web development position in January of 2018 for a company called Total Tool Supply. At Total Tool Supply, I design, develop, and maintain many websites, along with an e-commerce site. Also, I collaborate with the marketing department to design promotional materials and learning content for our sites.

True to heart, I am a very curious artist that likes to explore many different mediums. Besides design and web development, I started a leather jewelry brand on Etsy.com. My love for web design and development may have stemmed twenty years ago. Yet, my journey of learning is lifelong.
